

INVITATION

he Alsacian region on the west bank of the Upper Rhine has been in an active cultural dynamic since the establishment of a wine-making industry there by the Romans in 58 BC. Since then, through the rules of Clovis and Lothar, Charles the Bald and Louis the German, and later as a result of realignments during the Holy Roman Empire, the culture has existed in a lively tension between German and French influences which happily now advantageously coexist in a balanced blend.

Certainly we all benefitted from the decision of Andreas Silbermann (1678-1734) to leave his native Saxony and learn the craft of organ building in Alsace, where his instruments represent a canny cohabitation of French éclat and German gravitas. Some of this style was transferred by his younger brother and apprentice Gottfried (1683-1753) when he returned home to work for the Saxon king, building stellar instruments quite unlike the central-German norm (which some of you may have seen and heard during our most recent PIPEDREAMS Tour).

This tension resurfaced at the turn of the twentieth century when Emile Rupp, a student of Widor and organist at St. Paul's Church in Strasbourg, entered into a heated debate with Adolphe Gessner, organist of the garrison church, St. Maurice, over the relative quality of the 'new' organs of the day (by primarily German builders) as compared with the 'vintage' French-leaning instruments from Silbermann and his son. Since these Silbermann organs also proved themselves as excellent vehicles for the music of Bach, it was not long before Albert Schweitzer, a native Alsacian from Gunsbach, joined in the fray, and the 'organ reform' movement was begun.

Perhaps you will be able to join me over a glass of Alsacian wine to discuss the distinct qualities of German and French instruments, the relative merits of historicity and progress, and the delight we all should celebrate in differences. Come along on our latest journey...an amazing adventure is guaranteed!

THE ALSACE REGION along the Rhine River border between France and Germany has been the subject of a centuries-long tug of war between the two countries, and is all the more exciting and beautiful for it. The sense of cross-pollination surfaces in the architecture, the language, the arts, the cuisine, the wine and of course, the organs. Strasbourg, Colmar and Mulhouse are the notable cities and they are embraced by quaint villages of brightly-painted, steep-roofed half-timbered houses. In economic terms, Alsace is part of the Rhine valley corridor, one of the most important trading routes in Europe since the Middle Ages. Consequently its economic activity has always depended as much on its Germanic neighbors as on links with other parts of France, and as a result the region has long been one of the most prosperous in France.

STRASBOURG is the formal seat of the the Vosges mountains, at the heart of European Parliament and the capital of three European countries: France, Ger-Alsace. The city is home of the Gothic many and Switzerland. Thanks to its Cathédrale Notre-Dame de Strasbourg with its animated astronomical clock and has one of Europe's largest medieval quarters. In Grand Île and Petite France cobbled streets and canals weave between crooked, timber-framed houses tory), a label of excellence for its unique that have survived for hundreds of years. The Grande Île was the first city center to be classified entirely as a World Heritage Site by UNESCO. Strasbourg is the ninth largest city of France with nearly half a million inhabitants in a metropolitan area. The city itself is the seat of the Council of Europe, the European Court of Human Rights, the European Ombudsman, the Eurocorps, the European Audiovisual Observatory and, of course, the European Parliament (which also holds sessions in Brussels). Needless to say, this high toned presence in Europe has given the city a vibrant cultural life to match.

MULHOUSE: This industrial powerhouse is situated between the Rhine River and distinctive historical buildings, from the medieval old French city to the 19th-century industrial boom, Mulhouse was the first Alsatian city designated as a "Ville d'Art et d'Histoire" (City of Art and Hisheritage.

COLMAR: Nestled among vineyards, its traditional houses, canals, floral displays, amazing cuisine, famous wines and charming accommodation make it an outstanding microcosm of Alsace - showcasing its lifestyle, conviviality and hospitality. Despite a population of nearly 70,000, Colmar retains a 'country town' atmosphere which contributes so much to its charm. Aside from the lavishness of Alsatian wine (mostly whites in a Germanic tradition), Colmar is also renowned for its superbly preserved old town, adorned with timber-framed wood houses that reflect an exceptional blend of Germanic and French architecture.

Charleston, Illinois. After obtaining her Master's Degree from New England Conservatory, Boston (under the guidance of Yuko Hayashi and Mireille Lagacé), she continued her studies in Paris with Marie-Claire Alain, André Isoir and Michel Chapuis, completed by masterclasses with Francis Chapelet, Luigi Ferdinando Tagliavini and André Fleury. She received the First Prize of Excellence from the conservatories in Rueil-Malmaison and Boulogne-Billancourt as well as a Master's Degree in Musical Education at the Sorbonne Ph.D. in Musicology at the Tours University (thesis on Aristide Cavaillé-Coll's organs in homes, theaters and concert halls). Formerly organist at the American Cathedral in Paris, in 1989 she was named titular of the 1867 Cavaillé-Coll choir organ at the Trinité Church, where she founded their past weekly noontime concert series. She has performed more than 570 concerts. Among her recordings, she participated in the DVD/CD Documentary The Genius of Cavaillé-Coll (Fugue State Films). special interest lecturer in the museums of Berlin and soon wherever his help was needed between Paris and Moscow. Another focus of his work has been WWI battlefields and the persecutions in Germany after 1933. In the past decade his private interests shifted to music with the Piano Salon Christophori's collection and concert activities in Berlin. He enjoys collecting decorative arts, old toy trains and historic Christmas decorations. Since 2016 Tim has also been accompanying Pipedreams journeys to Europe.
